III EDiSo International Symposium

Barcelona, UPF, 28-30 June 2017

Inequality and new social discourses

Second call

The period to call for participation and invite participants in the working group sessions at the III EDiSo International Symposium is now open. Proposals for thematic panels, individual papers, participation in the data analysis workshops and poster presentations can now be submitted:

- Presentations in Thematic Panels [TP]: Preferably for researchers who want to share research findings and results and to exchange ideas with colleagues with similar research interests. Participants should indicate what panel they wish to contribute to. The list and description of panels is available here.
- Individual papers [IP]: Preferably for researchers who want to share research findings and results. Researchers who consider that their research does not adjust to any of the proposed thematic panels may present their work as an individual paper.
- Data Analysis Workshops [DAW]: Preferably for young researchers with ongoing research projects who wish to participate in practical sessions concerning research methods which may be helpful for their work. The list and description of workshops is available here.
- Posters [PO]: Preferably for researcher who wish to present research findings from finalized projects as well as from emerging and ongoing research projects in order to benefit from open discussions and debate with other researchers.
- Emerging Debates [ED]: Following on the ongoing dialogue which started in previous editions (EDiSo-Seville and EDiSo-Coimbra), emerging debates basically aim at presenting and discussing work and research perspectives, sharing research tools, points of view and so on, with the aim, beyond bridging different opinions together, of reaching consensus and jointly constructing proposals for solutions or for further development. The list and description of emerging debates is available here.

Instructions for authors

1/ Paper proposals or contributions should include:

a- Title.

b- Author/s' name/s.

c- Language of the paper or contribution (which should be the same as the language of the title and the abstract).

d- Name of the panel, workshop or emerging debate to which authors wish to contribute (not necessary for individual papers or posters).

e- Abstract or summary of the paper or contribution (maximum 3000 characters, including spaces).

f- References (maximum 15000 characters including spaces).

2/ The language of the presentations or interventions does not need to coincide with the language in which each session is presented (panel, workshop or debate). Proposals in any of the EDiSo working languages are accepted.

3/ The time distributed for each presentation will be 25 minutes (15-18 minutes for presentations and 10-7 minutes for discussion). The remaining 5 minutes (to complete each 30-minute time slot) will be used for room changes between presentations.

The instructions concerning organisational matters specific to the coordination of panels, workshops and emerging debates are available here.

The evaluation of proposals will be carried out by the Scientific Committee, based on the relevance, contribution to the discipline and the links with the Symposium theme and EDiSo objectives.

Proposals should be submitted here.

Registration

Registration will be conducted on the following website: <http://edisportal.org/events>. The deadline for early registration is 15 March 2017.
